1	Help for single households. All the help seems to be targeted at families and those on benefits. Those on benefits get enough, especially those with kids who do not work at all. It is time to support workers and especially those who live in single households who pay all the bills themselves. I do not get pay rises in my employment. Those on benefits do. It is the people on benefits who do not work who get everything - I am not talking about those on benefits who work. People on benefits should do some work, just a small amount to pay for their benefits. so if they are on say £70 a week, they should do 7 hours work - something that benefits the community or the environment.	4/3/2022 2:18 PM

9	winning the lottery! I can no longer keep up with rising costs due to being retired, worked out my budget before I finished work and failed to factor in the massive rise in energy, the never ending council tax hikes, water costs, and food.Silly me but it will be interesting to see what finishes me off, hyperthermia, malnutrition or covid.! My monthly NHS pension just covers my council tax, gas , elec and water, there is nothing left for me, wonder why I bother to go on living as it will only get worse. Triple lock on state pension has been scrapped. TBH I loook forward to being dead, there is no pleasure in life and it is only going to get worse. The area I live in is horrible, dirty and full of street drinkers. I keep my house nice but the street is vile. Really depressed, what on earth did I go to work for ove 45 years for? It is only going to get worse. NCC gives out info about food banks, I used to donate to one, but can no longer afford to do so, has anyone considered what will happen when donations drop due to the cost of living crisis but demand increases for exactly the same reason. Money advice is all well and good and may help some but when there is simply not enough coming it to meet basic needs even when people are working what then?	3/31/2022 11:17 AM
10	At the moment budgeting isn't really the issue. The issue is the spiralling costs and wages not keeping up. I have already trimmed spending and cut back on loads of things, but it's at the point where it's not enough. How can you trim things that have already been totally cancelled or trimmed to the point you can't do it any more? The area I live is considered affluent by the council and hardly ever receives benefits by the council (such as energy efficiency loans etc) but it's about time it did. this cost of living crisis is now hitting middle income earners and if essentials need cutting then its things like council tax that will be stopped being paid before it impacts my mortgage payments I need to provide a roof for my family and the benefits I currently get from the council in the area I live is very minimal!	3/31/2022 9:49 AM

24	I am upset with the use of public Transport here in Nottingham. Most of the time I can see very less number of passengers on buses and tram. I would request to reduce the ticket price in such a level that people most of the would use public Transport. That will help to reduce the pollution and also help dealing with the fuel cost	3/29/2022 12:34 AM
25	A better living wage or actually recognised that a single mum that works needs extra help as well as paying all the bills on one wage makes it that we struggle and are unable to do anything other than work so when we get time off as a household it's spent in the house as we cannot afford to go anywhere	3/28/2022 4:57 PM

39	I feel embarrassed to say I have money concerns because I earn a good wage of £50k (although no real pay rises for the last 8 years) but I am struggling due to council tax, mortgage payments and all the other rises. I am now single after my long-term partner died last year.	3/23/2022 1:44 PM
40	lenders not making it so difficult for people who are struggling to get better help that doesn't negatively impact your credit file, making it easier for people to get lower interest payment options to help them out of debt that aren't IVA's etc. Taking each individual on a case by case basis instead of treating everyone having money problems the same, punching numbers into a computer and not listening to people's reasons for things, not everyone's story is the same and not everyone's financial issues have necessarily been caused by poor money management, sometimes people can't help what has happened (i.e financial abuse by a partner).	3/23/2022 12:37 PM
41	lower council tax - why is it so high.	3/23/2022 11:37 AM
42	Support to become carbon neutral, live in a flat with on street parking so cannot plug in car - is NCH considering addressing this - to support with meeting this and financial impact it has on residents of Nottingham City? 60	Options to help before it becomes an issue. When I contacted my energy supplier they responded saying I was in credit completely missing the point that my concern was I'll struggle when prices go up as difficult now. The systems in place often only offer help when it's too late and once in debt it's much harder to get out than to not get there in the first place. However, with cost of living crisis there is no way good money management will be enough. I have been on benefits due to ill health for 6.5 years, these have always been inadequate usually around £2500 a year less than needed based on my budget but now they aren't increasing enough to cope with the increased costs, so having welfare payments that covered costs is all that's left really, universal basic income would be better	3/21/2022 5:51 PM

68	Not having rising energy costs that are through the roof. And giving people false hope like forcing them to have a £200 loan on your council tax bill in October that you have to pay back. The cost of food energy water and other bills are rising each year. Most people on benefits never have enough money left over for food let alone increasing the cost of everything	3/21/2022 4:04 PM

113	I'd like my windows fitted and insulated properly so I can't feel the wind blowing in from outside, heating is on and it's still cold, takes ages to warm up. Poorly fitted windows. Back bedroom windows leak and are also very very draughty. I work and pay full rent but never get anything done in my house and when I do I get half a job or total bodge job.	3/3/2022 5:31 PM
114	Yes, the same treatment handed out to the banks and the 'too big to fail' corporations that are robbing us blind	3/3/2022 3:20 PM
115	Paying less council tax ..Gas ..Electricity ..Water . This is where people get in to trouble when prices go up but their money stays stagnant so we rob Peter to pay Paul and cut down on our food .	3/3/2022 2:19 PM
116	Not personally, but I think the council need to be more proactive in approaching people who do have issues, as the knock-on effect of helping the poorest ultimately means increased outgoings for many who have better management skills but are also "poor" statistically speaking.	3/3/2022 2:04 PM

118	I need someone to sit down with me and take all my debts and sort them out as I am so stressed about it that i cant face it	3/3/2022 1:32 PM
119	More money. Most people with very little money have great budgeting skills, developed out of necessity. I'm not saying upskilling isn't valuable to those who don't have the skills but that these people are in a minority among low income households.	3/3/2022 1:29 PM
